Horse Raising.

Mr. Maddux has over fifty head of horses on his five-hundred-acre estate and nearly every one of them is a champion. Several of them were put over the hurdles while I was there, and their performances were excellent. St. Nicholas Black Lady, Dolphin, Anna Bruce and Miss Cartoon were the performers. Mr. Payne, who drove me out to the farm, agreed with me that St. Nicholas was the steepest, but Mr. Maddux, who is a well known and well respected horse man, would not commit himself to an opinion. Nor would Mrs. Maddux, who came down to see the jumpers put through their paces. Mrs. Maddux is remembered by Richmond people as the lady rider who took so many prizes in the first horse show held there, four years ago. She does not ride now, but she shows, and she and her husband exhibit any longer Searchlight and Grey Cap, their two was soon to be placed in the Capitol Square at Richmond. Governor Smith was born in King George county, in the year 1800, but he begun the practice of the law in Culpeper when a young man. In that way, it was while a resident of Culpeper that he met the congressman of that county, and the congressman of Extrim, by which he was known to every Virginian. General Smith did not like the idea of getting his mail only once a week, so he undertook the operation of stage coaches from Washington to Culpeper, by which the town received mail three times a week. The Congress made an appropriation to pay the cost of carrying the mail, and General Smith carried the line to Orange, then to Charlottesville, to Amherst, to Lynchburg, to Danville, and, finally, to Millledgeville, Ga. In the items of postage appropriations every year would appear an additional year for carrying
